

TAXPAYER ASKS TOWN BOOKS AUDIT

Harvey Johnson Hires Hall and Seeks Support For Move To Audit New Lenox Twp. Books

Harvey Johnson, a tax-payer and property owner of New Lenox, called in his friends and neighbors to a mass meeting he sponsored at Emile hall in New Lenox Tuesday evening for the purpose of showing his audience why he thinks an audit of the township books should be made.

In opening the meeting, Mr. Johnson said he was holding this meeting on his own, as he was not connected with any political clique nor was given any financial assistance by anyone in New Lenox. He said, however, as a taxpayer of New Lenox he thought it might be beneficial to the taxpayers and citizens of New Lenox to "expose the situation that we are facing with some of our political servants whom we trust with our money," as Mr. Johnson put it.

In pointing out the reason why he thought an audit should be made of the books of New Lenox township, Mr. Johnson stated that at the annual town meeting held the forepart of April this year, he presented a resolution asking that the township books be audited by a certified public accountant. Mr. Johnson then read the resolution offered at the town meeting.

"After the resolution was read," Mr. Johnson declared, "James Sherwood, the moderator objected and that started off the fireworks. The taxpayers wanted to know what right he had to object. The resolution was carried by a large majority. 'The three honest, capable and efficient citizens whom I appointed to procure the books from Supervisor Fred Francis to be turned over to the public accountant for the purpose of an audit, were refused the books, Mr. Francis stating it was illegal.'"

"It has been asked of me where is all the gravel going to? Can some body in the hall answer this one? I can't."

"Mr. Sherwood," Mr. Johnson continued "asked me for an audit of the township books about two and a half years ago, saying there was a shortage of $15,000 in the town funds. I told him at that time, why don't you ask an old timer to ask for an audit? Sherwood told me that they were yellow and a bunch of dead heads. 'I later found out that there had been a shortage of $14,883.95 in 1933, and that this shortage had been paid off.'"

Mr. Johnson made many serious charges against Justice of the Peace James Sherwood and exhibited receipts and canceled checks as proof of his startling statements.

In one particular instance Mr. Johnson named a Mr. Emile, a railroad worker as having paid Sherwood $10.25 for an automobile license and that Sherwood signed and gave Emile a receipt for same. After waiting a long time for the plates and failing to receive them, Emile wrote to the Secretary of State setting forth his case and Mr. Johnson read a letter from the Secretary of State saying his office had no record of having received his application or remittance and suggested that Mr. Emile take the matter up with the state's attorney, but Mr. Emile did not do so. He went to the Frankfort State Bank, and thru them sent his application and remittance for an automobile license to the Secretary of State and in a few days he had his license plates. Mr. Emile was in the audience and vouched for the story.

"Citizens of New Lenox," Mr. Johnson continued, "are you going to be called Yellow and Dead Heads by this Justice of the Peace of your town and let him continue to audit the books? I say impeach him. I need your help, citizens. This is your fight as well as mine. Now citizens, what is your pleasure?"

In his closing remarks, Mr. Johnson made the following statements: "Why is it illegal for the people of a community to want to know what is being done with their money?"

"I believe that a political office holder who spends the tax-payer's money should have a periodical accounting as well as any other business and I think that an honest office holder would himself show the taxpayers he is on the square.

"When I asked for the audit I did not accuse any persons of any wrong doing, but by the actions of the town board at the annual meeting it seemed very fishy to me.

"I still say as I have said before, I believe as Americans, tax-payers and citizens of New Lenox, we have the right to know all about the business of our township.

"I have heard it said the audit was a dead issue. I want to inform you that is not a fact. I am pulling a few strings and I am most positive that the books will be audited.

"It has been said if the $800 was paid for an audit the taxes would jump sky-high. Well tax-payers, it would only cost about 4 1/2 cents per hundred on the valuation of your holdings. It has been said that the tax warrants of New Lenox were hard to sell and there must be some reason for this.

"I believe an injunction can be had and should restrain the supervisor from active duty while the township books are under question."

THIEVES ROB MOKENA OIL CO. OF TIRES, OIL

Fred Rauch of Mokena Oil Company, had a big surprise Wednesday morning when he went to open the plant and found that burglars had gained entrance during the night, by smashing the glass of the door leading to the office. A window in the stock room had also been broken, but barrels of oil standing in front of the window, prevented the thieves from crawling thru.

After gaining entrance into the office part, they forced their way thru the stock room opening a double door leading to the loading platform and loaded up a good sized cargo consisting of 22 brand new tires of Leland and Lee makes; 22 inner-tubes; 14 cases of oil, each containing 24 one quart cans; 12 flash lights and four brand new batteries.

Greasy finger prints were found on the window sill where they had at first tried to gain entrance.

No attempt was made to ransack the office altho $500 had been left there. The total amount of the loot is $387. The Phillips 66 Oil Company had the stock insured. The loss to the Mokena Oil Company will be approximately $40.

The Will County Sheriff's office was called and notified of the robbery but the deputies did not appear until 2:30 in the afternoon. No trace of the robbers have been found nor of the stolen goods.

Frankfort To Have Boy Scout Troop Soon

Through the splendid cooperation of Mayor Sangmeister and several other public-spirited individuals, Frankfort is to have a Boy Scout Troop.

These individuals are to be commended for their interest and foresight in the boyhood of Frankfort. This village is located in Potawatomi Trails council, the headquarters of which is in Harvey and is under the directorship of Harold G. Boltz.

Potawatomi Trails Council includes the townships of Orland, Frankfort, Green Garden, Peotone, Bremen, Rich, Monee, Will, Washington, Crete, Bloom and most of Thornton. It is understood that Mokena which is also in this council is organizing a troop.

This Council is operating a Camp near Buchanan, Mich., on the St. Joseph river. This year the camp was open for three two-week periods. The periods had enrolled, 56, 68, and 65 boys. This Council has 42 units of 1168 scouts and cubs.

Camping under adequate leadership, is the best builder of better boyhood.

The Boy Scouts stand for a better citizenship and character building. Camping and hiking are a means to that end as well as occupying a boy's idle time in giving him a supplementary education.

All boys in Frankfort desiring to join, watch for place to meet. The date is August 10th.

We would be more than grateful to any club or organization that would give a few minutes of their time for us to explain to them the aims and purposes of Scouting. It is desired to acquaint all adults in Frankfort to the Scout programs. I can be contacted at Tinley Park, telephone 203W any evening.

All right, boys, remember, I would like to see all of you August 10th. Watch for further announcements.

Commissioner's Staff.

To Decide First Place In Midwest Soft Ball League

Mokena journeyed to Frankfort Tuesday night to decide first place in the Midwest soft ball league. Did they do it? Well take a look at the box score and then ask Frankfort to be sure its right.

Sornny's superb pitching allowing no hits and no runs and one base on balls surely should account for it all but don't forget there were fine fielding plays along with it.

The local boys banged Smitty and Klepper for 7 runs. Kohl getting the hitting honors with a triple and a home run.

Friday night Mokena travels to New Lenox.

Edward Kordewick, 27 years old, 12559 Elm St., Blue Island, was seriously injured Monday night while attempting to jump on a moving freight train at the Wolf Road crossing at Mokena. The train passed thru here at 11:08, but the train crew did not know that the man had attempted to board the train and that he had been injured.

Kordewick was thrown in such a way that his right foot was on the rail and the wheels of the cars passed over it crushing it so badly that it had to be amputated.

George Heisner residing about a block away from the scene of the accident, heard the man's call for help and came to his aid. Shortly afterward, Mayor Harry Mall, Harry Schoen, Al Hentch also appeared. About this time, Frank Sizer was driving down Wolf Road and threw his car lights on the injured man who was found to have presence of mind, even tho he was badly hurt, and he tied his sock around the injured member to stop the flow of blood.

Kordewick was placed in a car driven by Al Hentsch and taken to Silver Cross hospital in Joliet where the crushed foot was amputated.

At latest reports, Kordewick is getting along nicely. He had been visiting with friends in Mokena that evening.

Poland, Not Danzig, Is Germany's Ambition In Europe's Newest Crisis, Observers Claim

There's a Way to Avoid War by Making Free City Really Free, but Hitler Can't Weaken—He's a Dictator!

By NORBERT KLEIN

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WARSAW.—A sun-tanned peasant looked over a rippling field of six-foot Polish barley. He figured it meant war. His grandfather told him that 1812 also brought a record crop to Poland and the next winter came Napoleon. He himself remembers 1914's record crop; the World war started that year.

Poland will have another bumper crop this year.

This peasant neither knows nor cares that some Prussian statesman said "he who controls Bohemia rules Europe." Bohemia is far away to the south. But he does know—and cares intensely—about a remark Frederick the Great once dropped: "Whoever rules the mouth of the Vistula rules Poland, notwithstanding who is king there!"

He cares about this because Danzig lies at the mouth of the Vistula, a city where Poland's vast world trade naturally finds outlet to the Baltic sea. But Germany wants Danzig, the Poles want independence, and everyone knows Frederick the Great was right.

Not Vital to Germany.

This is why the Poles get nervous when Nazi Leader Albert Forster parades his storm troopers in Danzig or hurls threats of Berlin interference unless Warsaw lets the Free City go back to the Reich. For Danzig itself is a minor consideration. Poland knows, and Nazis admit, that Danzig is not in the least vital to Germany, as it is to Poland. Moreover, everybody admits that the Free City itself is but a stepping stone in Adolf Hitler's shrewd plan to bring Poland under his power. He's read about Frederick the Great.

Danzigers themselves watch this impending battle with little enthusiasm. A few of the bolder, less reasoning of them follow Fuehrer Forster through the streets but the beer-drinking burghers want only one thing, peace. Danzig may be only 4 per cent Polish and 96 per cent German, but the Free City owes allegiance to no one but itself. Indeed, should Germany take control, Danzig would immediately drop in importance as Poland forced all her seagoing trade through the new artificial harbor she has created for this very purpose, Gdynia.

Traditionally a Free City.

Danzigers have only to recite their history to realize that the present status is far superior to Anschluss with the Reich. Until the Twelfth century this seaport was but a Pomeranian fishing village where Lubbeck sea captains began stopping when they found it a breaking-point for their long journeys along the Baltic seacoast. Soon they began trading salt and cloth for furs, amber, grain and timber, and Danzig began its modern life as a trading post.

An unpleasant chapter in its history took place November 14, 1308, when Teutonic knights returning from Palestine assumed an unexpectedly un-Christian attitude by massacring 10,000 Danzigers and taking possession of the city. Germans had been coveting for years.

But these men were master builders and the Danzig they created still stands, characterized by the Stockturn, the Kiek-in-die-Koeck, the Swan or Fish tower and such great churches as St. Mary, St. John and St. Catharine.

Became Allied With Poland.

This regime lasted until 1454 when Poland's king, who had ceaselessly sought an outlet to the Baltic, won support of overseas powers in a battle against the Hansa and the Teutonic order. Danzig, its defender gone, saw it must find a new one or be absorbed by Poland.

So the Danzigers did a surprising thing. They disarmed Poland's king by entering into a personal union with him that lasted until 1793. During this period the city existed as an independent republic and exercised those extraordinary privileges, "staple right" and "guest right" long after they had disappeared elsewhere. Danzig even outlived Poland.

Frederick the Great came along late in the Eighteenth century and for the first time this independent Hanseatic city fell under a foreign rule. It remained thus until the treaty of Versailles again made it free in 1918. Thus, in the present crisis, it would be more in keeping with Danzig's history and present function if it were to remain free.

Poles Remember 1900 Uprising.

Why the argument, then? For one thing, Danzig did a foolish thing in 1920 by proving disloyal to Poland during the 1920 Bolshevik invasion. The smart government fathers at Warsaw could foresee this perfidy popping up again and threatening their precious outlet to the sea. So they built Gdynia from a small fishing village into the Baltic's No. 1 seaport, a city of 130,000 inhabitants which last year cleared 9,173,497 tons of freight and 43,205 passengers.

As Gdynia's trade has expanded, Danzig's has diminished. This, naturally, is Danzig's chief complaint against Warsaw. But the Poles quickly point out that Danzig has three times the traffic it enjoyed in 1913 when it was a German port. They also believe that with Poland's economic growth there will be enough trade for both harbors. But not unless Danzig forswears its apparent allegiance to Germany. After all, Poland will not commit suicide if she can help it.

Poland Rushes Defense.

There's no solution in sight yet, but the peasants still look at their bumper crop and say it means war. They believe—and Warsaw has encouraged it—that Adolf Hitler does not want Danzig, but Poland itself. They sneer at explanations that he covets Danzig because it is 96 per cent German; Adolf Hitler will take anything he can get, Poland included.

There's only one peaceful way to settle the argument, and that involves making Danzig a really free city, outside the Polish customs union and thus eliminating Danzig's principal grievance—that the Poles control its customs.

Under such an arrangement Poland might give Danzig more of her overseas trade. In return for Germany's acceptance of this plan, Poland could give the Reich free transit for her railroad and highway across the corridor to East Prussia.

But Adolf Hitler has told his people they shall have Danzig. And dictators can't back down!

48 Legislatures Declare Peace After Cut-Throat Trade Fight

EGGS, CATTLE, LETTUCE—Typical agriculture products which have been discriminated against in the modern "war between the states." Observers think the war's over, because legislators are putting away their guns. Here's the story:

CHICAGO.—A reversal of the trend toward "Balkanization" of the 48 states through erection of trade barriers by legislation has been recorded by the Council of State Governments.

Five states took such mutually retaliatory laws from their books during recent legislative sessions and about 20 other states refused to enact them.

The Council, which has fought the tendency to set up such barriers to free trade over state lines, usually sought by special competitive groups, one against the other, held a national conference on the subject last April. Meanwhile investigators from the federal bureau of agricultural economics found a "maze" of barriers which they said were "limiting distribution and raising costs" on practically every food product—milk, butter, eggs, poultry, meats, fruits and vegetables.

With most legislatures now adjourned, the Council now reports a hopeful picture.

Among outstanding actions was Indiana's repeal of port-of-entry provisions in its state alcoholic beverage act, resulting from efforts by surrounding states to co-operate in solving problems arising from conflicting liquor law provisions. Missouri also repealed a liquor act which, although called "anti-discriminatory," was regarded by many as a trade barrier.

Oklahoma repealed its 1937 port-of-entry law because Texas, rising up in arms, planned a retaliatory law which was dropped when Oklahoma declared peace.

Several legislatures defeated bills discriminating against "foreign" trucks. Connecticut refused to approve a bill which would compel operators of out-of-state trucks and busses to purchase Connecticut gasoline by limiting the size and number of gasoline tanks on commercial vehicles.

Discrimination against out-of-state wines and beers was rejected by California, Connecticut, Florida, Oregon and New Jersey. California refused to adopt retaliatory measures against products of several eastern states which imposed discriminatory taxes on California wine.

Several states rejected bills to place high tariffs on out-of-state agricultural products. Oregon and Vermont turned down tax bills discriminating against oleomargarine, while Iowa refused to increase its present oleomargarine tax. Arkansas legislators would not levy a 25 per cent duty against products of four other midwestern states which had imposed tariffs on certain Arkansas agricultural products, particularly cottonseed oil.

The 1939 war between the states is apparently over.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Amazing angles turn up in battle Roosevelt is waging over amendment to the neutrality law . . . Sentiment seems to be that Senator Norris of Nebraska is due for a deflating . . . Monetary bill not likely to become an issue in the coming presidential campaign.

WASHINGTON.—The battle President Roosevelt is waging over the amendment of the neutrality law has some amazing angles. To begin with, scarcely any intelligent observer, unswayed by politics, really believes that any law that congress could possibly pass will insure keeping the United States out of war. And as to neutrality, as Bernard M. Baruch told the senate foreign relations committee, "There ain't no such animal."

Any possible law will hurt one side or the other in any major conflict. It is openly admitted that the sort of law the President wants would probably favor France and Britain as against Germany and Italy in the war everybody is afraid of right now. And curiously enough everyone admits that the continuance of the present law favors China in the struggle against Japan, as long as it continues to be an undeclared war, but would favor Japan the moment two-year conflict became a declared war.

But the present law, for the preservation of which a new battalion of death has been organized in the senate, bans shipments to belligerents (in a declared war, of course) of "arms, ammunition and implements of war." There is no mention of food, or of steel or cotton which can be made into explosives. And there is very little prospect that any determined fight will be made to include those. Yet actually they are of the essence.

Food Most Important of Articles We Might Export

Looking at the situation practically, of all the articles that this country might export to the nations mentioned as being favored by the President's plan, food is the most important. The rest of the things follow so far behind as to be relatively unimportant. In a big long drawn out war it is starvation, both of her army and navy and of her civilian population, that Britain fears most. France is pretty nearly self-supporting, leaving out the possibility of extended occupation of her territory such as occurred in the World war.

Everyone knows also that lack of foodstuffs was one of the elements which operated potently to bring Germany to her knees in the World war. The darkest days of that war, from the standpoint of the allies, were those when there was terror that the German submarine blockade might starve out England.

It is common knowledge that England has been stepping up her arms and munitions and airplane production to the point where supplies of these war materials may not be of pressing importance. The longer the outbreak of war is delayed, the less important these particular imports will be. The rush buying of planes and munitions by Britain and France in the last year from this country was against the possibility that war might break out before their own productive capacity was adequate.

Of course they will continue to need the raw materials. But none of these is barred in the present neutrality law. So that the situation is presented that the neutrality bloc in the senate is staging a heroic battle to prevent shipment to France and Britain of things that they probably will not need when war comes, and is doing nothing to prevent shipments, at that time, of things that Germany will probably be doing her utmost to prevent Britain and France from getting.

Monetary Bill Not Likely to Be an Issue in Campaign

There is much talk about the monetary bill being an issue in the campaign but, while it is of course impossible to say that it will not be, it would seem that the probabilities are against it. It is far more likely that, as far as the voters are concerned, it will be forgotten.

Had the revolt against President Roosevelt succeeded, that would have been something else again. Had the net result been that the government ceased its subsidizing of domestically mined silver, that would have been decidedly a couple of other horses. It might easily have been the decisive element in determining who is to be the next President of the United States.

Then, the silver mine owners and the silver mine employees would have had reason to remember, with resentment, the whole affair. It may be that the President's remarks at Hyde Park, attacking the Republicans for supporting higher silver prices, would have redounded to the benefit of the Republicans.

As it is, the silver mine owners will get just six cents an ounce, roughly, more than they were getting before. It is not important politically. Even if it were terribly important economically, which it is not, it would have been a settled fact so long before the heat of the campaign develops that only a few persons would have been interested.

It may be that the Republicans will be able to make some use of the continued subsidizing of foreign silver. Few persons inside the United States are in favor of that, and these few only exporters to silver producing countries, of which, after Mexico is named, there are few.

Important Factor Is if Something Else Pops Up

But that issue also may result in indifference on the part of the voters. The important factor there is whether anything else happens to keep public interest in it alive. For example if, during the presidential campaign, Mexico is still being held up to the public, because of news events then, as treating American capital badly—if she happens to be selling the oil from the wells she confiscated from Americans, for example, to Germany—this particular subsidy will hurt the Democrats considerably.

This subsidizing of foreign mined silver is a very difficult thing to defend, on the stump. There are business men who favor it, business men with things to sell to Mexico and other silver producing countries, but naturally such individuals are the rare exception when it comes to calculating voting strength. They simply do not count.

So, if it happens to be a dull campaign, with very little to interest the voters, this foreign silver situation just might happen to be important, especially as none of the rank and file of the Democrats would be interested in defending it. Or, if Hitler should be raising Cain at the time, with Mexico apparently on the side of the dictatorships, it might easily become a tremendously important issue.

Senator Norris of Nebraska Seems Due for Deflating

If one may predict the toppling off their pedestals of present idols by the same rules which have generally worked in the past, Sen. George W. Norris of Nebraska is due for a deflating. He has run up against that curious and hard to understand intangible—pride in itself of the house of representatives. He may or may not win this time—in the conference row over that TVA hundred-million-dollar bond authorization. But he has hurt the pride of the house, and the wound will not heal. Nothing lasts forever, and the members of the house as well as the senate were getting a little tired of the Norris dictatorship anyhow.

So when Norris appeared as the only senator to represent the upper house in the conference on the TVA bill, he was taking a chance. He ought to have realized it, but dictators gradually grow callous to pride in other people.

Members of the house generally might not ever have known about it, but Andrew J. May of Kentucky, chairman of the house military affairs committee, was enraged at Norris' unyielding attitude. So he issued a statement which began:

"Responsibility for the present stalemate of the house and senate conferees . . . is squarely on the shoulders of Sen. George W. Norris. It is a sad commentary on our democratic system of government that one member of 'the most deliberative body in the world' does not know the meaning of the word compromise and presumes to impose his will, arbitrarily and arrogantly, upon the house of representatives."

No One Wants to Get Into Controversy With Norris

Those are pretty nearly fighting words to the house! Or at the very least, they are calculated to bring about a declaration of independence. One may wonder why Uncle George laid himself open to the attack. Not by his stubbornness. No one who knows Norris would expect anything else. But by his very delight in the fact that the other senate conferees were entirely willing to leave everything to him—thus putting him in the position of one man telling the house what it could and could not do!

It is not at all surprising that the other senate conferees did not attend the meetings. They did not want to get involved in a controversy with Norris. Nobody does. It is not very healthy politically. When everybody assumes that one's antagonist is absolutely honest and sincere one starts out with two strikes and an unfavorable umpire. And it was so easy to say to Norris, "You just go ahead and chew those house fellows up. We are behind you 100 per cent." Especially as his fellow senators had such marvelous excuses for looking out for the interests of their farmer constituents in the agricultural bill.

But the house members didn't like it at all. They are very jealous of the senate anyhow, though individually most of them aspire to togas. There is no more sure-fire appeal than an appeal to the pride of the house as against the senate. Moreover, there is a new generation in the house that knows not Joseph. Almost nobody is left who served with Norris when he was battling against Uncle Joe Cannon. To many of the newcomers he is just a tiresome tradition.

OAK LAWN 6; ORLAND 3
The Orland Baseball team dropped their second game in a row Sunday when they lost to Oak Lawn by the score of 6 to 3. The game was a very good affair up to the 6th inning when an Orland error gave Oak Lawn two runs. "Buck" Nilocai was on the mound for Orland, and pitched splendid ball, but due to errors he was again defeated. Nicolai allowed only five hits while walking three. Beckman pitched for the winners, and allowed six hits while walking only one.

Due to an injury to the Orland catcher, Wheeler was behind the plate, and did a swell job, seeing that it was the first time in about three years that he has caught a game.

Next Sunday Orland will play at home with Palos Park as the opposition. Game is to start at 2:30 p. m. and already several could be seen nosing quietly through the placid lagoons.

Barney came from the house and joined his mother and Kay.

Kay looked up into the clean-cut, boyish face. "Going into town?" she asked.

"Needs must. Heavy business."

There was a shadow of apprehension in her eyes. "Shopping?"

"Yes. For Mother." Strong fingers closed about her arm. "And that's all, Chica. My word of honor."

Kay followed him into the house, leaving Mrs. Hamilton alone on the veranda.

A bateau approached the shore, navigating an eccentric course. In the double, high-backed seat amidships, Mrs. Hamilton saw an elderly couple, and even at this distance it was apparent that the woman was more than a trifle nervous. The boatman was white, a long, angular individual who paddled the little craft viciously, to the further discomfort of his passengers. Mrs. Hamilton recognized the man. Jeff Butler, she remembered—and she had never liked him. He had seemed a sullen and resentful person. She knew instinctively that something was wrong, and this suspicion became certainty when Jeff drove the nose of the boat far up on the sloping bank with a last powerful stroke of his paddle.

Mrs. Hamilton rose to greet them. "Anything wrong?" she inquired.

"Yes." The man spoke in a high, excited voice. "Who's in charge around here?"

"I am. Why?"

"That fellow who had us in his boat . . ." He gestured toward the lagoon. "He was drunk."

Ruth Hamilton's eyes narrowed. "I'm terribly sorry . . ."

"I was so frightened," interjected the little woman. "I didn't know what was going to happen. I thought every minute he might drown us."

"That wouldn't be likely. The water is very shallow in most places. But that doesn't rectify matters. Sit down . . ." She designated chairs. "Tell me just what happened."

"He acted queer right from the beginning. And when we got into the boat, he was ugly—"

"—And insulting, wasn't he, Arthur?"

"Quite. He kept paddling us, fast, when we wanted to stop and look at things. He wouldn't do what we wanted—"

"And he had liquor on his breath."

"Then he got very angry when we told him to bring us in. Now, we're not complaining . . ."

"But you have every right to complain. I know the man and I don't like him. I'm glad of this definite excuse to let him go."

The woman softened. "We don't want anybody to lose his job . . ."

guidance of God in the discharge of his duties. This is true not only of kings and national leaders, but of each one of us. If we trust in God and are obedient to His guidance, He will bring about astonishing results in the lives of any one of us.

III. A True Worshiper (vv. 3, 6).

He walked in the ways of his forefathers in his obedience to God. A man does not need to be a blind worshiper of the good old days to realize that America could profit by walking in the ways of those of our forefathers who daily walked with God.

Note also that Jehoshaphat had a real personal spiritual experience of his own. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord" (v. 6). Spiritual exaltation makes a man better fitted to live in the daily round of life where he must keep his feet on the ground. There is a dearth of new personal spiritual experiences in our time. How long is it since you and I have felt our souls strangely warmed? God is ready and willing to do this for us now, as He was in the days of Jehoshaphat.

IV. A Wise Educator (v. 9).

Here was a real program of religious education. A wise teacher knows that it is not enough to remove the bad, he must replace it with the good. Jehoshaphat tore down the places of heathen worship, but he substituted the teaching of the Word of God. That kind of a program of nation-wide Christian education would be tremendously worth-while in this year of our Lord 1939 and within the confines of our own beloved country.

Read verses 7 and 8 and you will note that most of the leaders in this teaching campaign were laymen. The priests were evidently for the most part not interested. This has all too often been so, but let not that deter the layman from going ahead in God's name.

V. A Respected Ruler (vv. 5, 10, 11).

His own people gave him the recognition of love and loyalty (v. 5). The jealous nations around him were afraid of him, for they knew that God was with him (v. 10). This was what would be in our day regarded as a rather unusual means of national defense, but note that it was tremendously effective. Would that America were a nation united in loving obedience to God's law. Then would our enemies be afraid because God's hand would be upon us for good.

A gold-plated silk fabric is described in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. A silk dress is impregnated with a solution of a gold salt, which is then decomposed chemically, leaving a coating of pure gold upon the fiber, at a cost of about $3 per yard. When the dress is worn out, the gold can be recovered and used again. The garment was recently exhibited in England.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 42), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general system tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Debts, Deficits— And Dangers

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

For the ninth time in succession the Government of the United States has closed its fiscal year with a staggering deficit.

During the twelve months ending June 30, the difference between income and outgo—between what Washington collected and what Washington spent—was more than THREE BILLION DOLLARS.

And, meanwhile, the National Debt—which some day must be paid out of taxes collected from the people's earnings—has mounted to more than FORTY BILLION DOLLARS.

How long this practice of piling up debts and deficits will continue is anybody's guess. Certainly Washington in recent months, under the pressure of self-seeking groups and lobbies, has shown little tendency to halt it. Consequently it ignores the fact that a day of reckoning impends.

And how long the American people will submit to such increasing burdens is also anybody's guess. Steadily their protests against reckless political spending, with all its attendant ills and its hardships on the worker and earner, continue to mount.

For today the people realize the threat to any country of a reckless fiscal policy. Current events abroad continue to flash on a world screen the tragic picture of nations wrecked and peoples enslaved through processes in which reckless manipulation of the national income played a significant role.

Increasingly our citizens realize that one of the greatest contributions America could make to the peace of the world would be a return to that prosperity and progress which America enjoyed for so many years.

They have seen that unnecessary and reckless spending of the people's money by politicians hampers rather than hastens such prosperity. They have seen production and employment languish. They have seen dissatisfaction increase—even among the beneficiaries of the system.

And now, after nine years of growing debts and deficits the American people ask a return to that policy of economy in government and encouragement of enterprise which created American prosperity in the past.

Their demand is justified.

For, as every American knows, all the money that government and the politicians love to lavish comes from the people. And to the people belongs the right to say how their money shall be spent.

They know that in Debts and Deficits lurk Dangers.

Good Weather Is Cause Of Boost In Rat Numbers

Favorable weather conditions are responsible for the large numbers of rats infesting farms and other premises throughout Illinois, according to a report made to the College of Agriculture Bureau of Biological Survey, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

"There is no foundation for the belief advanced by many people that the large amount of corn being carried over on farms is responsible for the high rat infestation," Oederkirk explained. "The trend of rat populations in central states the past 16 years shows that a high infestation has coincided with a period of more or less optimum weather and other conditions favorable to plant growth. The past 18 months has been a favorable period for rats and field mice to reproduce."

Powdered red squill is the best poison for destroying rats on farms, since it is deadly to them but comparatively harmless to domestic animals and humans. The red squill should be mixed and exposed with two or three types of good food such as canned salmon, hamburger or a mixture of moistened rolled oats and corn meal. One part of poison to 16 parts of bait by weight is the correct proportion if a high grade of red squill is used. The different baits should be put out in teaspoonful quantities so that rats may enjoy their preference.

Calcium cyanide fumigant can be used successfully, particularly to destroy rats in burrows, under concrete floors and other places where the gas can be confined. It is safe to use calcium cyanide fumigant in corn cribs, but the corn should not be fed to stock for three or four days.

Other steps which will help rid premises of rats include the burning of rubbish and the piling of lumber and boxes so that there is a space underneath.

Farmer's Bulletin No. 1533, "Rat Control," may be obtained from local farm advisers.

Neutrality Shelved

By Chauncey W. Reed.

Facing unquestionable defeat if he attempted to revive his so-called neutrality plan in the Senate, the President, after a night conference with Senate leaders on the evening of July 18, reluctantly accepted their advice to drop his program. At the end of the conference, the President is reported to have insinuated that he would "take his demands for the repeal of the arms embargo to the people". Senators Borah, Johnson and Clark who led the opposition to the Administration's foreign policy in the Senate are convinced that the American people do not want any more entangling alliances, have signified their intention to meet the President's challenge and are preparing to present the opposition viewpoint to the public in a series of personal and radio appearances.

The Senators and Representatives who are opposing the President's neutrality program are of the firm opinion that the safest way for us to keep out of the European war mess, is for us to keep our noses on this side of the Atlantic. The furnishing of arms and ammunitions to any one or more of the belligerents is one sure way for us to become entangled in European quarrels and there is little doubt that if we start furnishing arms and ammunition to any one or more of the warring nations, it wouldn't be long before we would be asked to furnish men.

THIS MUST NOT HAPPEN. Our boys belong on this side of the Atlantic. Let Europe settle her own boundary disputes. Our interests are here at home. The lives of our American boys must not be sacrificed in order to appease the desires of some of our statesmen to have Uncle Sam act as the policeman of world affairs.

Room Bureaus Set Up For New York Fair

NEW YORK (Special)—Two agencies have been set up in New York City to insure World's Fair visitors' getting living accommodations at a most reasonable price. One is the Mayor's Official World's Fair Housing Bureau, Inc., with headquarters in the Chanin Building, 122 East 42d Street, set up by Mayor LaGuardia to locate rooms for visitors in private homes and dwellings. The other is the Hotel Room Information Bureau of the Hotel Association of New York City, representing 180 hotels with a total capacity of 80,000 rooms. The bureau is at association headquarters, 221 West 57th Street.

Both agencies function without any charge to the visitor in finding him clean and comfortable accommodations at a price within his means. Rooms in private dwellings range in price from $1 per night per person upward, with the average per person $1.50.

Every Western Union and Postal Telegraph office is equipped to handle requests for rooms in conjunction with the Housing Bureau's operation. Every policeman in New York City is familiar with the plan and is equipped to give visitors first hand information on methods of obtaining registered and sponsored rooms.

On making the application for a room the visitor pays a deposit of 50 cents per night per person for which he receives a receipt. The receipt may be presented to the landlord in lieu of cash as part payment for the room.

Women of six states will make a pilgrimage on Aug. 12 to Frances E. Willard's girlhood farm home and one-room school near Janesville, Wis. Announcement of the pilgrimage was made at Evanston this morning at Willard Centenary headquarters. Hosts will be civic, business, patriotic, and youth and temperance groups of Janesville.

The Centenary of the birth of Miss Willard, outstanding Nineteenth Century exponent of women's rights is being internationally observed this year. Center of the pilgrimage festivities will be the one-room school near Janesville where Frances Willard as a young woman taught before becoming famed as an educator, temperance worker, lecturer and suffragist. The school, which centers a memorial park, now is a youth hostel unit. The large grove on the school grounds, skirting Rock river, will provide picnic accommodations for visiting motorists.

Special invitations are going to leaders of the D.A.R., W.C.T.U., and prominent educators.

The program, which will include a pageant and speeches by congressmen, will be arranged so that guests from Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin can attend without spending a night away from home.

Danzig or hurls threats of Berlin interference unless Warsaw lets the Free City go back to the Reich. For Danzig itself is a minor consideration. Poland knows, and Nazis admit, that Danzig is not in the least vital to Germany, as it is to Poland. Moreover, everybody admits that the Free City itself is but a stepping stone in Adolf Hitler's shrewd plan to bring Poland under his power. He's read about Frederick the Great.

Danzigers themselves watch this impending battle with little enthusiasm. A few of the bolder, less reasoning of them follow Fuehrer Foerster through the streets but the beer-drinking burghers want only one thing, peace. Danzig may be only 4 per cent Polish and 96 per cent German, but the Free City owes allegiance to no one but itself. Indeed, should Germany take control, Danzig would immediately drop in importance as Poland forced all her seagoing trade through the new artificial harbor she has created for this very purpose, Gdynia.

Traditionally a Free City.

Danzigers have only to recite their history to realize that the present status is far superior to Anschluss with the Reich. Until the Twelfth century this seaport was but a Pomeranian fishing village where Lubbeck sea captains began stopping when they found it a breaking-point for their long journeys along the Baltic seacoast. Soon they began trading salt and cloth for furs, amber, grain and timber, and Danzig began its modern life as a trading post.

An unpleasant chapter in its history took place November 14, 1308, when Teutonic knights returning from Palestine assumed an unexpectedly un-Christian attitude by massacring 10,000 Danzigers and taking possession of the city Germans had been coveting for years.

But these men were master builders and the Danzig they created still stands, characterized by the Stockturn, the Kiek-in-die-Koeck, the Swan or Fish tower and such great churches as St. Mary, St. John and St. Catharine.

Became Allied With Poland.

This regime lasted until 1454 when Poland's king, who had ceaselessly sought an outlet to the Baltic, won support of overseas powers in a battle against the Hansa and the Teutonic order. Danzig, its defender gone, saw it must find a new one or be absorbed by Poland.

So the Danzigers did a surprising thing. They disarmed Poland's king by entering into a personal union with him that lasted until 1793. During this period the city existed as an independent republic and exercised those extraordinary privileges, "staple right" and "guest right" they built Gdynia from a small fishing village into the Baltic's No. 1 seaport, a city of 130,000 inhabitants.

But Adolf Hitler has told his people they shall have Danzig. And dictators can't back down!

48 Legislatures Declare Peace After Cut-Throat Trade Fight

EGGS, CATTLE, LETTUCE—Typical agricultural products which have been discriminated against in the modern "war between the states." Observers think the war's over, because legislators are putting away their guns. Here's the story:

CHICAGO—A reversal of the trend toward "Balkanization" of the 48 states through erection of trade barriers by legislation has been recorded by the Council of State Governments.

Five states took such mutually retaliatory laws from their books during recent legislative sessions and about 20 other states refused to enact them.

The Council, which has fought the tendency to set up such barriers to free trade over state lines, usually sought by special competitive groups, one against the other, held a national conference on the subject last April. Meanwhile investigators from the federal bureau of agricultural economics found a "maze" of barriers which they said were "limiting distribution and raising costs" on practically every food product—milk, butter, eggs, poultry, meats, fruits and vegetables.

With most legislatures now adjourned, the Council now reports a hopeful picture.

Among outstanding actions was Indiana's repeal of port-of-entry provisions in its state alcoholic beverage act, resulting from efforts by surrounding states to co-operate in solving problems arising from conflicting liquor law provisions. Missouri also repealed a liquor act which, although called "anti-discriminatory," was regarded by many as a trade barrier.

Oklahoma repealed its 1937 port-of-entry law because Texas, rising up in arms, planned a retaliatory law which was dropped when Oklahoma declared peace.

Several legislatures defeated bills discriminating against "foreign" trucks. Connecticut refused to approve a bill which would compel operators of out-of-state trucks and busses to purchase Connecticut gasoline by limiting the size and number of gasoline tanks on commercial vehicles.

Discrimination against out-of-state wines and beers was rejected by California, Connecticut, Florida, Oregon and New Jersey. California refused to adopt retaliatory measures against products of several eastern states which imposed discriminatory taxes on California wine.

Several states rejected bills to place high tariffs on out-of-state agricultural products. Oregon and Vermont turned down tax bills discriminating against oleomargarine, while Iowa refused to increase its present oleomargarine tax. Arkansas legislators would not levy a 25 per cent duty against products of four other midwestern states which had imposed tariffs on certain Arkansas agricultural products, particularly cottonseed oil.

The 1939 war between the states is apparently over.

We ate dinner at one of many res-aurants in the Fair grounds. My wife prelad chicken and mushrooms with cof-fee for 60 cents. I ate a salisbury steak les with coffee for 60 cents, and lamb po-chops for the boy cost 75 cents. For plunch we had hamburgers and pie, Fr, which ran us 20 cents each. It costs a nickel for pop or root beer at any of a co-dozen stands. We got to the Fair for th lunch one day and had dinner there ad that night. We had breakfast in camp next day, lunch at the Fair and pulled out late that afternoon for home.

Seeing New York

You can see something of New York th while you're at the Fair, for the mere cost of gasoline. The night we arrived, Br we took a 50-mile drive across town, w along the Hendrik Hudson Parkway is and back from the Battery up Broad-way to Times Square, then back to Geamp. We had a volunteer guide—one ut of the officials at the camp. Fr, o help a visitor. One of them talke Mo us for a half hour about things in Be general while we waited for an open op bus next morning for a sightsee-ing trip in Manhattan. In fact, any ew Yorker goes out of his way to help a Fair visitor.

We felt so much at home that when ve parked our car to catch a bus to ar the Fair on our first day's visit, we th argot to make a note of where we left cer, just walked away from it like we H could have done in our own home Rocwn. And believe it or not, we found hav, when we came back in the rain—H with the help of some of the passen-ers on the bus.

Bear in mind that the cost of coming hav New York depends on how you are er filling to come. We had a camp traile, slept in it, using a trailer camp whnce, a cabin one night during a pour-the rain, using school grounds twice ith the permission of rural neigh-ors, and parking three times at fillg stations. It took us six days to get ere.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

ADVERTISING'S NO MYSTERY

SOME of us remember well when John Slattery started in business. He couldn't have been over 25 and he had only a few hundred dollars in capital. But he did have a wife and two fine boys. He wanted to make them comfortable. He quit his job, went in on his own.

At first he would come to us and in his frank, likable way ask if we would buy from him. We liked John. He flattered us to have him invite us to become his customers. We began trading with him.

He treated us so considerately and so honestly; he gave us such good service; he was so grateful for our patronage, that we enjoyed being his customers. It made us feel good. Others felt the same way. His business grew.

Then he began asking more people to trade with him than he could reach in person. He had to run small advertisements in the newspaper, which he wrote himself after store hours.

As he grew larger he ran larger advertisements, and where in the beginning he had a handful of customers, now he had several hundred.

He continued to advertise in the newspaper. His business continued to grow. He couldn't know all his customers by name now, of course, but they felt that they could buy from him with confidence because he had been recommended to them by another friend whom they had always trusted.

This other friend who recommended John Slattery was the newspaper which carried his advertising.

Whatever you read in the newspaper you naturally feel you can believe, because you know that a reputable newspaper will not accept advertising from any but honest and reliable concerns.

Because this young man starting in business made use of that aid he built his business. As his business grew he was able to give his customers better service and more for their money.

Although few of the persons reading his advertisements and becoming his customers realized it, they were all indebted to the newspaper for its service in bringing to their attention an opportunity of getting more for their money by publishing advertisements of this enterprising young man.

Advertising is serving us in this same way every day, by bringing information of where we can buy most advantageously, by helping us to find what we want the lowest possible prices.

THE STORY SO FAR

Beautiful, young Kay Forrest has been employed by Christine Maynard, photographer, to pose for a series of pictures, the background of which will be exquisite Cathedral Gardens, famous Southern resort. Unknown to them, one Jeff Butler, mean, unscrupulous "swamp angel," has led a friend to spy on the two women. Kay, of necessity, is scantily clad while posing for the camera studies. Kay frequently stays with Mrs. Ruth Hamilton, her son Barney, of whom Kay is very fond, and her daughter Margaret. Mrs. Hamilton, a remarkable woman, conceived the idea of the Gardens following the death of her husband. One night, after a local dance, Kirk Reynolds, a ne'er-do-well gambler of Beverly, a resort town, and Kay go for a ride. Kirk's car collides with that of Harvey Jackson, and during the ensuing argument Kirk whips out a gun and kills the young, popular engineer. Kay is completely stunned by the tragedy. Kirk threatens to drag her into the thing if she tells even her father. Terror-stricken, she agrees to remain silent. However, the next time she goes out with Barney, he realizes something is wrong. She tells him nothing. Mrs. Emma Forrest, Kay's mother, is firm, positive and demanding. Her father is exactly the opposite, kindly, and unassuming. While at home Kirk Reynolds calls for her, and she is forced to go with him despite her family's protests. He tells her the circumstances make it necessary for her to marry him so she cannot be forced to testify against him if he is accused of Jackson's murder. They drive to a neighboring town and are married. The next time they are together Kay tells Barney she loves him, but is married to Reynolds. She refuses to tell him why she married the gambler, but he promises to try to understand. Meanwhile, Miss Sonia ("Babe") Henkel, Beverly beauty operator of questionable morals, and intimate friend of Kirk Reynolds, berates him for marrying Kay.

CHAPTER V—Continued

Babe was thinking aloud. "So you did kill Harvey Jackson."

He spoke acidly. "Pipe down on that."

"She was with you that night."

"What of it?"

"Plenty. Now get this, Kirk, and get it straight. I don't give a hang what you do with other women, but when you throw the harpoon into me, I get sore."

"So what?"

"So plenty. I know why you married this girl. And there are some things I'm not standing for. This is one of them."

"You're not threatening me, I hope."

"Take it any way you want. Where is she now?"

"None of your business. It just happens I don't mind telling you that she went out to the Gardens with that Hamilton kid."

"Making you look sappy, eh?"

Her voice cut into him.

He shrugged. "If that doesn't suit you—"

"It suits me all right. What doesn't suit me is that you didn't tell me what you had up your sleeve."

"Since when did I start shooting off my mouth to you? Now grab this, Babe, I'm in a tough spot, and you might as well know it."

"Okay."

"In this State," he said flatly, "a wife cannot be made to testify against her husband."

She said, "You did kill him, didn't you?"

"I'm telling you for the last time: Lay off that! I'm not talkin' to anybody, see, not even you."

"I'd like to help you."

"Then keep your trap closed. I'm saying nothing. Let the saps talk if they want. But don't you join in the chorus." He looked up at her. "And don't go soft on me."

"I won't. I've played around with you a pretty long time, you know."

"Yeh, I know. You're on the level . . . and I'm glad you're not doing a run-out. Though if you feel that way—go to it."

She said, "I don't though. It's just that this marriage of yours ain't easy to swallow all of a sudden. Also, whether you like it or not, I don't enjoy the idea of you being in a jam."

He took her hand with what was, for him, a great demonstration of affection. "You're not so bad yourself, Babe. So snap out of it."

"I will." She waved and went out the door.

"So he ditched me for a country kid." Her fists clenched. "Well, he can't get away with it."

CHAPTER VI

The Lotus Gardens were nearing completion. It was understood that they would be ready for the public as soon as the azalea season had passed its peak. More reclaimed swamp, greater and more bewildering beauty. More tourists. Business men were delighted, non-business persons didn't quite know how to accept it . . . and godly souls who lived in the very rural districts considered it a disgrace. Country preachers declaimed against this imported iniquity from the pulpits of cross-roads churches, hands were held high in horror, the name of the Devil was bandied freely and with unctious. And—town and country alike—the people pointed unwaveringly at what had occurred since the completion of Ruth Hamilton's scheme to beautify ugly swampland and at the same time earn a fair income for herself and her two children.

There had been, for instance, the murder of Harvey Jackson on a lonely country road.

The Harvey Jackson Mystery. It was called that at supper-tables, at club-meetings, at church socials. It was thus dubbed in front-yard conversations and at gathering places like the Fair Play Store and the Bon Ton Pool Room. It was denounced as a shame and disgrace, and the public inquired frequently and vehemently why Gabe Dixon didn't do something about it.

Mr. Dixon was Solicitor of the Seventh Judicial Circuit, of which Beauregard County was a part. He was a resident of the town of Beverly: a man who was tall, lean and nervous. He had misty, shifty eyes and large, restless fingers and feet. He was addicted to stiff white collars and ridiculous little white wash-ties. In times of stress his emotional reactions were betrayed by an excited bobbing of his collar-button beneath a prominent Adam's apple. He was a keen politician and a member of a family which controlled at least half the votes in Beauregard County.

He was shrewd, keen and conscientious . . . whenever and wherever conscientiousness was not calculated to deprive him of votes. In a court-room, his very awkwardness made him effective, and he held the reins of office tightly, doing the major portion of his job with astonishing efficiency.

For instance, he was genuinely anxious to find and convict the killer of Harvey Jackson. That, he felt, would be an excellent move. Harvey Jackson had been one of the most popular young men in Beverly, son of ultra-respectable middle-class parents, an able young engineer and a man highly regarded by maidens and others. And because Mr. Dixon was sincere in his desire to convict, he—at first—said nothing about the odd little compact which had been found on the road beside Harvey Jackson's dead body. Of course, the whole town knew about the compact, and discussed it avidly. The man who had found it failed to keep the secret.

Solicitor Dixon investigated shrewdly, endeavoring to make sound evidence of that compact. He learned that it possibly belonged to Katherine Forrest—daughter of Andrew Forrest. He couldn't prove it, of course—not then—because he understood that it was a type of compact which could be purchased in any of several New York cosmetic shops; the sort of compact that touring ladies might have carried. Then he discovered that on the night of Harvey Jackson's demise, Kay Forrest had gone riding with Kirk Reynolds. The evidence was still too circumstantial, but it indicated several things to Mr. Dixon. He believed that Reynolds had killed Jackson and that Kay Forrest had witnessed the affair.

Beverly's hard common sense, plus verbose interpretation by Solicitor Dixon, gave a fairly proper picture of the tragedy. Mr. Dixon was quizzed.

"You reckon Kirk Reynolds killed him, Gabe?"

"He might have."

"Then why don't you have him arrested?"

"No chance of convictin' him. Not on what we've got."

"You knew all the time that was Kay Forrest's compact. Why didn't you light on him before?"

"Lots of gadgets like that. Any of these tourists might have lost one similar."

"But you could have tried him, couldn't you?"

"That wouldn't have been smart. He'd have been acquitted, and then he couldn't be touched again."

"Well—with a hopeless gesture—"

"Look what he's done now. He's gone and married her."

"He sho' has. And I can't make her testify against him. Smart boy, this Reynolds."

"Smarter'n you, eh, Gabe?"

Mr. Dixon was unperturbed. "No, I wouldn't be sayin' that. This here marriage—with them not even livin' together—tells us plenty. It's just about the same as sayin' that Kirk killed Jackson and Kay Forrest saw him do it. They might's well have advertised in the Gazette. And listen, when you know a man has done a crime, when you know it, mind you, it's just a question of time before you git the evidence to convict him with."

Cathedral Gardens was bathed in silver glow. Moonlight limned the old house sympathetically. A sign, tacked to a pine at the entrance to the Gardens, announced that inasmuch as this was the last night of the full moon, no tourists would be admitted on succeeding days after seven o'clock.

A young man and a girl left the house and walked toward the water. The young man was tall and straight and broad of shoulder. He walked slowly and gazed through the almost unearthly beauty of the Gardens with pardonable pride.

Jim Owenby, landscape engineer, had designed and built Cathedral Gardens. To a Beverly man had been given the distinction of having created this beauty spot. Working from Mrs. Hamilton's original idea, fired by youthful ambition and possessing great technical skill, he had planned and supervised.

Margaret Hamilton was young, slender and unobtrusively beautiful. Her hair was ash-blond, and she wore it close against her small, perfectly shaped head. Her eyes were gray, like those of her brother. At the moment they were soft and gentle, perhaps because her hand rested confidently on the muscular arm of the young man at her side.

He helped her into a little bateau which was tied informally to a stake. He seated himself beside her, and handed her a paddle. "We'll both have to navigate this craft," he said lightly. "Unless you want me to sit in the back."

A boat came out of the darkness and purled gently past them. A woman's voice, freighted with a sigh for the things that might have been, came to their ears. The voice said, "Did you see that young couple? It must be wonderful to be young—and to be here in the moonlight."

Margaret Hamilton touched the hand of the young man. The place was overpowering in its beauty. Unbelievable. Tiny islands, flaming with blossoms, seemed vague and unreal. There were no dimensions.

Jim Owenby propelled the little craft into a sheltered bayou. Here they were sheltered by a midnight blackness, and his arms went about the girl. He said nothing. He did not kiss her. Here was a communion which transcended the desire for demonstration and caresses, and if their bodies were vitally alive—if they were acutely conscious of each other—that was because they were very young and very much in love.

And then he said, gently, "I thought we could talk out here . . ."

"I understand. Let's go back, because we must talk."

They found a seat in an arbor which was mantled with wisteria, and Margaret said, "Now we can talk."

He took her hand. "It's about Kay Forrest," he said.

Margaret nodded. "I knew that."

"I'm sorry for her. Sorry as hell."

"So are we all."

Jim Owenby hesitated. "I've always known Kay. Since she was a kid. She's pretty swell."

"Barney thinks so."

"Well, he's right." Jim changed the subject slightly. "You know, Barney has stuff I didn't think he had. I thought he'd go under when Kay married this Reynolds . . . but during the past week he's been taking it on the chin like a man."

She nodded. "We've been watching him, too. Mother and I. It's tough on him, but perhaps it's what he needed. A sort of tempering of the steel that we know is in him. I'm terribly sorry for him."

Jim shook his head. "Why did Kay marry Kirk Reynolds?"

Margaret said, "You tell me."

"Right . . . and I'll only be telling you what everybody in Beverly is saying. She was forced to marry him so that she couldn't testify against him if he happened to be tried for Harvey Jackson's murder."

"Of course."

"She was with Reynolds that night. She saw what happened."

"Do you blame her for being afraid of him?"

"No. She's just a kid. And to see a murder . . . She's in a rotten spot, but that doesn't alter the fact that—unless we're wrong about everything—Kirk Reynolds murdered Harvey, and Harvey was my best friend."

"I see . . . And so?"

"And so," he said bitterly, "I can't let matters stand where they are. I want to talk to Kay—want to see if she'll tell me the truth."

Margaret pressed his hand. She said quickly, "You mustn't."

"Why?"

"It isn't fair. Kay came here to get away from the nasty gossip in Beverly. She's our guest . . ."

"But suppose she knew that she was going to be protected?"

"She couldn't know that. She'd only know that you'd be willing to do your best."

He said gravely, "In this State a woman may testify against her husband. The law merely says that she cannot be compelled to."

"You mustn't, Jim."

"But I must."

"Why?"

"Because Harvey was my best friend, that's reason number one. Secondly, I'm fond of Kay."

Margaret was staring off into the night. She hoped that her voice was steady. "Suppose you knew that Kirk killed Harvey. What would you do?"

"I'm not sure." He paused briefly. Then, "Listen, dear—and try to understand. A man can't just sit back and do nothing. I can't . . . and neither can Barney."

"Barney?"

"Of course. He's all shot by this marriage of Kay's."

"You and Barney have been discussing it, haven't you?"

"Of course. As a matter of fact, we haven't talked about much else."

"And so?"

"We feel like a couple of prime saps. Or perhaps that sounds more flippant than I intend. What I'm driving at is that—for everybody's sake—we don't intend to let Reynolds get away with this."

"You know he's dangerous."

"What of it?"

"This, Jim . . . and I'm trying not to be selfish. The past few years haven't been easy for us. You didn't know Dad—so you can't understand what his death really meant. Then the financial collapse and the sympathy of our friends—which was the wrong kind of sympathy. And Mother's worry over Barney which led to our coming down here so he could get away from wealthy friends who were too kind."

She paused and he touched her hand reassuringly.

"I know. Plenty tough sledding."

"It is. Beverly has done a lot for all of us. I've been happy—maybe because I found you. But whatever the cause, I'm jealous of my happiness. I don't want it destroyed."

CHAPTER VII

Barney said, "I'm proud of you, Kay. My mother is proud of you. Margaret is proud of you. The cook is proud of you."

Kay laughed in spite of herself. "The third waffle?" she inquired.

"Plus grits and shrimp and what have you."

The girl rose from the breakfast-table and joined Mrs. Hamilton on the veranda. The morning was brilliant; pleasantly cool and crystal clear. Dozens of tiny bateaus were waiting patiently for passengers, and already several could be seen nosing quietly through the placid lagoons.

Barney came from the house and joined his mother and Kay.

Kay looked up into the clean-cut, boyish face. "Going into town?" she asked.

"Needs must. Heavy business."

There was a shadow of apprehension in her eyes. "Shopping?"

"Yes. For Mother." Strong fingers closed about her arm. "And that's all, Chica. My word of honor."

Kay followed him into the house, leaving Mrs. Hamilton alone on the veranda.

A bateau approached the shore, navigating an eccentric course. In the double, high-backed seat amidships, Mrs. Hamilton saw an elderly couple, and even at this distance it was apparent that the woman was more than a trifle nervous. The boatman was white, a long, angular individual who paddled the little craft viciously, to the further discomfort of his passengers. Mrs. Hamilton recognized the man. Jeff Butler, she remembered—and she had never liked him. He had seemed a sullen and resentful person. She knew instinctively that something was wrong, and this suspicion became certain when Jeff drove the nose of the boat far up on the sloping bank with a last powerful stroke of his paddle.

Mrs. Hamilton rose to greet them. "Anything wrong?" she inquired.

"Yes." The man spoke in a high, excited voice. "Who's in charge around here?"

"I am. Why?"

"That fellow who had us in his boat . . ." He gestured toward the lagoon. "He was drunk."

Ruth Hamilton's eyes narrowed. "I'm terribly sorry . . ."

"I was so frightened," interjected the little woman. "I didn't know what was going to happen. I thought every minute he might drown us."

"That wouldn't be likely. The water is very shallow in most places. But that doesn't rectify matters. Sit down . . ." She designated chairs. "Tell me just what happened."

"He acted queer right from the beginning. And when we got into the boat, he was ugly—"

"—And insulting, wasn't he, Arthur?"

"Quite. He kept paddling us, fast, when we wanted to stop and look at things. He wouldn't do what we wanted—"

"And he had liquor on his breath."

"Then he got very angry when we told him to bring us in. Now, we're not complaining . . ."

"But you have every right to complain. I know the man and I don't like him. I'm glad of this definite excuse to let him go."

The woman softened. "We don't want anybody to lose his job . . ."

JEHOSHAPHAT: A LIFE OF OBEDIENCE

LESSON TEXT—II Chronicles 17:1-6, 9-12.
GOLDEN TEXT—But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness.—Matthew 6:33.

Obedience is one of the old-fashioned virtues which has been pushed aside in our present mad rush of self-expression. It needs to be revived if we are to have a happy, contented, and useful people. The lesson for today affords an excellent opportunity to give class members a right perspective. Many regard obedience as something which is exacted by those who desire to have authority over us, but as a matter of fact it is a principle established by God for the right and orderly conduct of life, the observation of which results in blessing and prosperity, and the ignoring of which brings chaos, fighting, bitterness, and disappointment. Obedience to parents, to the law of man, and to the law of God should be taught and exemplified by us, even as it was by Jehoshaphat. Obedience in his life made him

I. A Good Son (vv. 1, 3, 4).

He followed his father Asa and his forefather David insofar as they had followed God. Apart from God and the influence of the Christian faith, the tendency is quite the other way. Frequently we see that a father who came up from poverty by his own diligence and ability will have a wastrel son who amounts to nothing, or even worse, one that ruins himself and others. Blessed is the son who has a godly father and who has sense enough to follow in his steps in obedience to God.

II. A Capable Administrator (vv. 2, 5, 12).

Jehoshaphat faced real problems. The nation was prospering, but there were many difficult questions of foreign relations and in domestic affairs. Especially was he concerned about their fellowship with the sister nation of Israel. Idolatry was still common in the land, new territory had to be consolidated and fortified.

The man who is obedient to God's law and whose heart is lifted up toward Him may expect that all his faculties will be stimulated, and that, furthermore, he will have the guidance of God in the discharge of his duties. This is true not only of kings and national leaders, but of each one of us. If we trust in God and are obedient to His guidance, He will bring about astonishing results in the lives of any one of us.

III. A True Worshiper (vv. 3, 6).

He walked in the ways of his forefathers in his obedience to God. A man does not need to be a blind worshiper of the good old days to realize that America could profit by walking in the ways of those of our forefathers who daily walked with God.

Note also that Jehoshaphat had a real personal spiritual experience of his own. "His heart was lifted up in the ways of the Lord" (v. 6). Spiritual exaltation makes a man better fitted to live in the daily round of life where he must keep his feet on the ground. There is a dearth of new personal spiritual experiences in our time. How long is it since you and I have felt our souls strangely warmed? God is ready and willing to do this for us now, as He was in the days of Jehoshaphat.

IV. A Wise Educator (v. 9).

Here was a real program of religious education. A wise teacher knows that it is not enough to remove the bad, he must replace it with the good. Jehoshaphat tore down the places of heathen worship, but he substituted the teaching of the Word of God. That kind of a program of nation-wide Christian education would be tremendously worth-while in this year of our Lord 1939 and within the confines of our own beloved country.

Read verses 7 and 8 and you will note that most of the leaders in this teaching campaign were laymen. The priests were evidently for the most part not interested. This has all too often been so, but let not that deter the layman from going ahead in God's name.

V. A Respected Ruler (vv. 5, 10, 11).

His own people gave him the recognition of love and loyalty (v. 5). The jealous nations around him were afraid of him, for they knew that God was with him (v. 10). This was what would be in our day regarded as a rather unusual means of national defense, but note that it was tremendously effective. Would that America were a nation united in loving obedience to God's law. Then would our enemies be afraid because God's hand would be upon us for good.

'Clothed in Gold'

A gold-plated silk fabric is described in Industrial and Engineering Chemistry. A silk dress is impregnated with a solution of a gold salt, which is then decomposed chemically, leaving a coating of pure gold upon the fiber, at a cost of about $3 per yard. When the dress is worn out, the gold can be recovered and used again. The garment was recently exhibited in England.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a good general tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life. WELL WORTH TRYING!

Give a Thought to MAIN STREET

• For, in our town . . . and towns like ours clear across the country . . . there's a steady revolution going on. Changes in dress styles and food prices . . . the rise of a hat crown . . . the fall of furniture prices—these matters vitally affect our living . . . And the news is ably covered in advertisements.
• Smart people who like to be up-to-the-minute in living and current events, follow advertisements as closely as headlines.
• They know what's doing in America . . . and they also know where money buys most!

"Truth" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 23.
The Golden Text was, "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are. . . Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth" (John 17:11, 17).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "O send out thy light and thy truth: let them lead me; let them bring me unto thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles" (Psalms 43:3).
The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Christian Science brings to light Truth and its supremacy, universal harmony, the eternities of God, good, and the nothingness of evil" (p. 298).

THOUSANDS of motorists have subjected 1939 Chevrolets to the Mileage Meter test. In cars with gauges feeding a measured quantity of fuel to the engine, these thousands have seen how the 1939 Chevrolet stretches out each gallon of fuel to make it go farther—extra miles farther.

What about oil? The fact is that the 1939 Chevrolet is unbelievably economical of oil—because the oil stays in the engine.

As to upkeep and tires—every motorist knows of Chevrolet's traditional record for low cost of maintenance.

Harry Schoen and Russell Bennett had a narrow escape from serious injury last Sunday when the car they were riding was wrecked while Mr. Schoen was attempting to pass a milk truck. Just as he was up to the truck, the driver signalled he was going to turn left and in order to avoid hitting the truck, Mr. Schoen got off the pavement and the hind wheels struck loose stones on the shoulder of the road, causing the rear end of the car to skid into a ditch and hitting the edge of a concrete culvert. Riding with Mr. Schoen was a hitch hiker, but luckily all three escaped injury. The car was badly damaged. The accident occurred three miles east of Joliet.

The annual Sunday School picnic of the St. John Sunday School was held last Saturday in the village park adjoining the church. There was a good attendance.

The Mokena band played at the German Day picnic held in the Frankfort grove Sunday afternoon and evening.

Leon Tonn who is connected with the Davis Insurance Co., in Chicago, has been enjoying his vacation the past week.

Chas. Smith spent the past week in Oak Park with relatives.

The editor and family, Leon Tonn, Harold aBlaz, Harland Merrell, all of Mokena and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Deadmore of Joliet enjoyed a most delightful time last Friday night at a wienie roast on the beautiful lawn of the Clarence Beagley home near Orland. Mr. Beagley has a very pretty country home. At the end of the spacious lawn is an open air fire place used for wienie and marsh-mallow roast and steak fries.

Rev. W. J. Geffert and family returned the latter part of last week from a visit in St. Louis, Mo.

The Mokena Civic Association rated over half a column writeup in the Metropolitan section of the Sunday Tribune last Sunday. The article gave a history of the association, its accomplishments and also gave a list of all the officers, chairmen of the various committees and the members of the committees.

Dolph Oswald of Guthrie, Oklahoma is visiting with his father Erhard Oswald and other Mokena relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sippel and Col. and Mrs. Don C. Hall visited the Ringling Bros., Circus and the Municipal Airport in Chicago Sunday. Col. and Mrs. Hall who have achieved national fame by hitch hiking to the San Francisco and New York Fairs this spring and summer, enjoyed their first air plane ride last Sunday. The plane they rode in attained an altitude of 2,000 feet and flew of the city. Both are quite enthusiastic about flying. They really had a big thrill out of this experience. Both are over 70 years of age but manage to get more out of life than most people do. They are enjoying good health and are always active.

The Circus

There is a depth of reason for the magic of the word "Circus." It has been the symbol of personification of all that is soulful and beautiful in the blending of personal attributes in the harmony of inspired human endeavor.

The Circus and the Theatre have been the arena and stage where stability of character and pride of achievement were dominant in the minds of artists and actors who, as purveyors to all classes of amusement lovers have held first and best place because of their absolute cleanliness and entire freedom from any attempt at sordid appeal.

As representatives of this newspaper and to satisfy our own personal desire "never to miss a circus" Mrs. Hall and I gave ourselves the pleasure of a visit to the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey Circus Sunday afternoon and evening, at Grant Park, Chicago.

To say that we were pleased would be very mildly expressing our reactions to the wonderful circus performance, and our sensation of pleasurable enjoyment seemed to be shared by all about us, as the close attention and frequent and timely applause of the audience clearly indicated.

The symmetrical beauty of the artists in the various feature acts, was evidenced in their ambitious and painstaking endeavors in each particular department of their work. Bright smiling faces, heads held high with a poise that only comes with the pride of accomplishment and an association with a circus organization that has never from the old days of "hold your horses, the elephants are coming," to the streamlined effects of the present age, lost sight of the salient elements of necessary manly and womanly perfection in public and private deportment.

Acrobats, Equilibrists, performers in every department, from ground work to fetes of aerial daring, horses and riders, animals and trainers, producing clowns and the efficiency of the property men, ushers and attendants, the capable conductor of the band, and his corps of musicians, together with the clear enunciation of the announcer, gave evidence of a united, concerted, endeavor to excel under the inspired management of the Ringling Brothers organization.

No essential element of the "old" has been eliminated, nothing of present day advancement neglected, and there was clearly demonstrated, a real conception of the hope of a maintained perfection of the Circus of "The World of Tomorrow."

It was a wonderful display, and Col. and Mrs. Don C. Hall bid them Good Speed in the worthiness of their endeavors.

Every participant in the Arena display and every member of the audience are mutually benefited by each successful performance.

"The show must go on."

Relatives from California arrived Sunday in the home of Mr. Schooler. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Erickson in Silver Cross hospital last Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooper are parents of a baby girl born to them in Silver Cross hospital last Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Werner and family and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roberts left last Sunday morning by auto for a trip to Arkansas, the birthplace of Mr. Roberts. They will visit in the Ozarks and many other interesting places.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gee and family motored to Milwaukee last Sunday to visit with Mrs. Gee's sister Almira and husband. Their two daughters, Charlotte and Barbara will spend this week there with their aunt and uncle.

In speaking of the western trip in last week's issue, just recently taken by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Koeller Sr., a few errors were made. The Glacier and rock slide were seen in the Canadian Rockies, at Banff in the national park. The stampee was seen at Calgary and the beautiful Columbia River drive was not on their way to Seattle but from Portland, Oregon to The Dalles, Oregon.

Laundry Soap Is Good Antidote for Ivy Poisoning

Down by the old mill stream there may be some poison ivy again this year, warns health specialist, Miss Fannie Brooks, College of Agriculture, University of Illinois. This innocent looking plant is easily recognized by its leaf which is always divided into three small dark green leaflets. In addition the plant may bear some whitish, waxy berries which will make recognition possible.

What picnickers and nature-lovers seem to forget is that it is not always necessary to touch the plant to get a good case of poison ivy. Some poisoning is caused by handling clothing or other articles that have come in contact with the plant. Many sensitive persons have found that the volatile, oily substance, known as toxicodendrol, issuing from the plant, has been capable of poisoning them although they remained a safe distance from the disturbing foliage. Again, other persons have found that smoke from the burning plants carries the poison and may cause serious injury.

If taken internally in sufficient dose, the plant is a decidedly irritating poison. For this reason, Miss Brooks pointed out, small children need to be watched to keep them from eating the tempting looking berries they find in the woods.

Poison ivy, in this part of the country, may be found in low moist soil, in dry soil, wood and on hill-sides. It flourishes particularly well along fence rows and at the edges of paths and roadways, hiding among the rocks, climbing posts and trees and mingling with other shrubbery.

Victims of the plant find out they are in trouble from two hours to five days after they are poisoned. Itching or burning sensations coupled with reddening of the poisoned surfaces.

Aug. Hentsch Has Tall Corn

Aug. Hentsch of Mokena reports he has extra tall corn growing in his yards, the stalks being 12 feet 6 inches tall with the ears of corn 6 feet from the ground. This corn is a root tested type from Bloomington. The corn was planted by Mr. Hentsch May 10th.

Repair Streets

Work on improving the Mokena streets is underway. Stone has been hauled for the past week and the spreading of oil will follow soon.

Where's Oscar?

By The Office Boy.

Well sir, it seems that I just can't get away from a fish story when I get some news. But maybe I hadn't ought to write this but send it on up to Burlington to the Lyer's Club!

Well, anyway, the Boss and Slug, the Lino operator went over to New Lenox Monday night and I said, "Could I ride along?" Result, I climbed aboard the old jaloppi and went.

When we got there we heard loud calls all over town of, "Where's Oscar?" said calls being directed at Mel Whitaker, Frank La Rocca, Wilbur Walsh and Rube Tart.

On investigating we learned that the aforesaid gentlemen went to Fox Lake last Thursday for the sole purpose of catching "Oscar" that well known fish with a $500 tag on his ear or somewhere.

Well, according to Mel, they caught Oscar or rather two of them did, (being as how they were paired off in two boats).

Yes sir, they caught the fish and the waves caused from landing said Oscar pretty nearly upset the boats.

Then they started for shore, parked their boats and then the fun started.

There was a big argument according to Mel, as to whether they would split the 500 bucks four ways or only two ways to the fellows who were in the boat who caught the fish.

Darkness came and the argument as in a dead-lock. Every one was anxious to get home so—now get set, here comes the pay-off: THEY THREW OSCAR BACK INTO FOX LAKE! $500 AND ALL! Messrs., La Rocca, Whitaker, Tart and Walsh I hereby award you the biggest and heaviest grind stone for a medal for that one.

Thousands Attend German Picnic

The German Day picnic held at Frankfort Grove last Sunday afternoon and evening drew thousands of people to the grove. A very interesting and colorful program was carried out. Four school bands of Frankfort, Mokena, New Lenox and Manhattan played.

Trained German shepherd dogs were exhibited and put thru various stunts.

The crowd was so great that the famed sauerkraut and Thuringer sausage supply was exhausted by six o'clock and a few hours later all the eat supplies were sold out.

About 40 barrels of beer were sold.

One accident marred the otherwise perfect picnic. One of the Joliet men assisting in the cooking stand, fell and broke his leg.

Postmaster Kreutzen of Chicago, Geo. N. Blatt of Joliet gave the principle addresses. Otto Ehtor, publisher of the German-American and president of the German Day committee, presided as general chairman and master of ceremonies.

AN OVERSIGHT

A correspondent sent the following extract from a friend's letter: "The natives of North Zululand have come to the conclusion that the white man is, after all, a fool. Recently a telephone squad was in that district, and the native's verdict was: "White man a fool. He puts up a wire fence; the cows can walk under it."

Gay and Interesting Designs for Cushions

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

"DEAR MRS SPEARS: I like to make interesting cushions—in summer bright cotton covered ones and silk covers in the winter. The cost is nothing as I find that after the waists of dresses are worn out, there are still parts of the skirts that are good enough to give long wear when made into these covers. J. B."

Thanks, Mrs. J. B., for that suggestion, and here are two covers that you might like to try. To make the contrasting edge for the round one, stitch two-inch strips together in points as at A, trim as at B clipping between the points then turn right side out. Pull out smoothly and press, then gather as at C. Stitch to one section of the cover as at D, then stitch the two sections together leaving an opening for the cushion.

To make a pattern for a modernistic patchwork cover, cut a rectangle of paper, then divide it into sections as shown. Use these sections as patterns to cut the fabric adding a seam allowance as at F.

There Are Two Ways to Get at Constipation

Yes, and only two ways—before and after it happens! Instead of enduring those dull, tired, head-achy days and then having to take an emergency medicine—why not KEEP regular with Kellogg's All-Bran? You can, if your constipation is the kind millions have—due to the lack of "bulk" in modern diets. For All-Bran goes right to the cause of this trouble by supplying the "bulk" you need. Eat this toasted nutritious cereal every day—with milk or cream, or baked into muffins—drink plenty of water, and see if your life isn't a whole lot brighter! Made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. COLD CUTS FOR DELICIOUS VARIETY

See Recipes Below.

Cold Cuts for Variety

For a help-yourself-party (or almost any other lunch or supper) few foods rival in popularity a platter of "cold cuts." Designed to tempt the appetite, and to provide interesting variety, this good-to-look-at and good-to-eat dish is a summer favorite.

Salami, liver sausage, thin slices of flavorome boiled ham, and corned beef or sandwich slices make an attractive and delicious combination. Wafer-thin slices of cheese, small sweet pickles and radish roses with sprigs of watercress complete the platter.

These same cold meats have other uses, too. For example, cubes of salami add zest to a green salad, corned beef makes a tasty casserole meal, and slices of boiled ham combine with cream cheese and chives to make a tempting and unusual dish for lunch or supper plates.

I've chosen from my file of tested recipes a half dozen which will add new interest to your meals. I hope they may inspire you to do a little experimenting on your own.

Luncheon Slices.

(Serves 4-5)

5 slices of sandwich loaf (1/4-inch thick)
1 egg (beaten)
Fine crumbs
Dip meat in beaten egg and then in crumbs. Fry in deep fat, heated to 380 degrees, until golden brown. Serve with sauteed pineapple rings.

Ham and Cheese Pinwheels.

(Serves 4)

1 3-ounce package cream cheese
1 1/2 tablespoons mayonnaise
1 tablespoon chives(minced)
4 slices boiled ham

Combine cream cheese, mayonnaise and chives. Spread generously on the slices of boiled ham. Roll each slice firmly, wrap in wax paper and chill. When ready to serve, cut the rolls into slices 1/4 inch thick. Arrange on a bed of watercress and serve with French dressing.

Rarebit Sandwich Filling.

1/4 pound dried beef
1 pound American cheese
1 cup condensed tomato soup
Grind the dried beef and the cheese in a food chopper. Add soup and blend well. This may be kept in the refrigerator for several weeks.

Ham and Cabbage Slaw.

(Serves 4-5)

3 cups cabbage (finely shredded)
1/4 cup green pepper (cut in slivers)
1 cup boiled ham (cut in slivers)
1 teaspoon onion (minced)
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon white pepper
1/2 cup salad dressing
1 egg white (beaten)
Combine cabbage, green pepper, ham and onion. Add salt and pepper. Fold salad dressing into stiffly beaten egg white, and mix lightly with salad ingredients. Serve in salad bowl.

Corned Beef de Luxe.

(Serves 5)

2 cups potatoes (cooked and sliced)
1 12-oz. can corned beef (sliced)
1 cup onions (sliced very thin)
3 hard cooked eggs
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
1/4 teaspoon salt
Pepper and paprika to taste
1 cup cheese (grated)
1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs
In a greased casserole place alternate layers of potatoes, corned beef and onions. Cut the eggs in two, crosswise, and push into the mixture, cut side up. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, milk and

New Method Used to Map Ocean Floor

Record Soundings Made In Atlantic Near Puerto Rico.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.

The recent discovery of a new and greater depth in the Atlantic ocean, establishing a new record of nearly five and a half miles (28,680 feet), north of Puerto Rico and Hispaniola, has called attention to efforts now being made to make complete contour maps of portions of the bottom of the ocean. The new depression has been named the Milwaukee Deep, from the United States cruiser from which the record sounding was made.

"The oceans have been carefully charted near certain land masses for navigation purposes for centuries, but it has been only in the past 85 years that soundings have been made extensively in efforts to chart the floor of the oceans themselves. Cable-laying advanced the plan, but until recently recordings of depths of more than 6,000 feet numbered but one to every 23,000 square miles.

No. 2. ACROSS AND UNDER THE SEA. All nations strive to develop the best possible diving aids. Pictured above is an Italian diver testing a new type of diving suit to be used for rescue and salvage work. This particular piece of equipment was developed by an Italian engineer and official tests disclosed many valuable features.

Ocean Echoes Depth.

More progress has been made in recent years through new measuring methods. For years measurements had been made by the slow procedure of dropping a plummet suspended by a piano wire. To make even one sounding in 12,000 feet of water, required stopping the ship for an hour. Today, delicate instruments measure the time it takes the echo of a sound at the sea's surface to return from the bottom, thus measuring the distance by the speed of sound. This can now be done while a ship is moving rapidly and many commercial vessels, equipped with the sonic measuring devices are speeding the work.

Sound travels almost five times as fast in water as in the air, so that the speed under water is close to a mile a second, thus indicating the delicate accuracy with which the time of the returning echo must be recorded. The problem is complicated by the fact that the speed of sound in water varies with the amount of salt in the water, its temperature and varying pressure. Air pressure at sea level is about 15 pounds to the square inch; 100 feet below sea level salt water pressure is 60 pounds to the square inch. At 5,000 feet deep, the pressure is 13,500 pounds to the square inch.

No. 4. WHEN THERE IS LIFE TO BE SAVED. In the recent Squalus submarine disaster a diving bell similar to the one shown here was used. By means of this kind of equipment the navy was able to rescue 33 men from a depth of 240 feet. This was the first actual life-and-death test of this particular diving bell and it was found to be very satisfactory in such manner of rescue work.

No. 1. A NEW SAGA OF THE SEA. Since the first time men have ventured toward the ocean's floor they have been using equipment similar to the standard diving suit pictured here. Although numerous safety devices have been advanced since these beginnings this type is still almost universally used.

Great Changes Seen.

The comparative shallowness of the sea in many places has been vividly suggested in the great changes that would be made in the boundaries of countries and continents were the surface of the ocean to sink only 600 feet, a little more than the height of the Washington monument. Ireland would then be joined to England, except for the North channel. England in turn would become part of the mainland of Europe, the water of the English channel having run out. A strip 1,500 miles wide would connect North America with Asia. New Guinea would become part of Australia.

The broadest ocean surfaces are in the Southern hemisphere, but north of the Equator occur the greatest submarine upheavals, deforming the bottoms of the Caribbean sea, and the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, in a broad expanse from the latitude of the Panama canal to that of Philadelphia. In these regions, especially in the Pacific, vast plains and plateaus, tall peaks and deep canyons form another world. In the shallower portions ocean currents are the breezes that sway submarine trees, and fish are the variegated birds flitting among the branches, while varied coral formations look like flowering shrubs.

Atlantic Floor Uneven.

Down the middle of the Atlantic, extending 8,000 miles south from Iceland, runs a mountainous ridge almost 10,000 feet above the adjoining basins. Soundings already recorded indicate that three-fourths of the Atlantic is at least 6,500 feet deep, and over half is 13,000 feet deep.

No. 3. FORTUNE LURKS ON OCEAN FLOOR. Not only do nations seek to develop diving equipment to aid in rescue work but fortune hunters dream of riches on the ocean floor and they too advance the science of diving. The Romano diving bell shown here is built to enable a diver to work a mile below the surface. This is a depth where the ordinary diver could not venture because of the terrific pressure.

The Pacific has more great depths than any other ocean, according to the records of the Hydrographic office of the navy department, which show eight in excess of 30,000 feet. The deepest hole in the Pacific is 35,400 feet, just northeast of Mindanao of the Philippine islands. This is the greatest recorded ocean depth in the world. The record in the South Pacific ocean is 30,930 feet; North Atlantic, the new Milwaukee deep, 28,680 feet; Southern Atlantic, 26,575 feet; Indian ocean, 22,968 feet. A sounding of 17,850 feet is recorded in the Arctic ocean, and one of 14,274 feet near the Antarctic continent (in the South Pacific).

Scientists admit there is still much work to be done but look forward to the time when deep soundings will be sufficient to chart all the mountains and the valleys on the ocean floor—the "epiogeny" as oceanographers call it. Some visionaries of the Jules Verne type look forward to the time when great window-walled submarines with powerful searchlights will carry photographers and tourists on extended trips into the depths.

THE afternoon dress with v-neckline, slim skirt and shirred bodice (1779) is unusually pretty for those of you who take women's sizes. Make it for hot days with short, full sleeves; repeat it later on, with the narrow roll collar and long, snug sleeves. Voile, chiffon, georgette, silk print and thin wool are pretty materials for it.

Dress With Jacket-Blouse.

A classic two-piece that will give you loads of wear on your vacation travels as well as summer days in town, is 1783. It brings you a sleeveless tennis frock with sunback, that becomes a smart little summer suit when you add the fitted jacket-blouse. Thus you can solve two important

AROUND THE HOUSE

To Inform You.—Read the labels on canned foods. Many tell the number of slices contained in the can. Others give additional useful information about the contents.

Keep Oils Cool.—Store oils, such as olive or vegetable, in the refrigerator. They are likely to become rancid when opened unless they are kept chilled.

Quick Baking.—Fruit and berry pies with lattice-style tops require less baking time than the regular two-crust pies.

Position of Trellises.—Trellises should be a foot to 18 inches away from a wall. This gives air a chance to circulate and gives you a chance to spray the back of the vine.

Use for Leftovers.—Leftover rice or macaroni mixed with cooked meat makes a good filling for green peppers or tomatoes. The latter need to be cooked only 20 minutes in a moderate oven.

Stains on Ash Trays.—To remove cigarette stains from brass ash trays, rub the trays with a paste of salt and vinegar. Then wash them well in hot water and soap suds.

Buying Hint.—Where pennies must be counted it is wise to make purchases that will mean less expense to take care of them. Plain bedding, such as spreads, pillowcases, etc., is the only sensible buy, as the frilled and fancy bed linens cost nearly double to have laundered than the plain ones and mean quite an item to the household expenses.
